Fastest and Most Powerful in its Class

THE SIX 425 AND UP
THE EIGHT 565 AND UP

In talking with you about its cars, the Hudson Motor Car Company tries pretty hard to make only statements that can be easily proved by anybody.

So, when we say, "The Terraplane Eight is the fastest and most powerful car in its price-range," you can not only have confidence in the truth of the statement—you can easily prove it.

The Terraplane Eight's engine is rated at 94 horsepower in all official lists of motor car specifications—the two next highest ratings in its price-range are 82 and 77 horsepower.

The New De Luxe TERRAPLANES with RADIO as Standard Equipment are now on Display

The greater roominess of the Terraplane Eight is measurable—a simple dressmaker's tape is all you need to prove it.

We are glad to have built such a car. We think you'll be glad and proud to own it.

"I learned something new about automobiles first time I drove a car like yours, sir. Terraplaning is the nearest thing to flying I've ever found on the ground."

"That's why I bought one. The Terraplane cruising speed of between 60 and 70 is so smooth you hardly notice the road or the engine."

THE TERRAPLANE Eight's top speed of 85 miles an hour has been proved under official supervision of the American Automobile Association.

The Terraplane Eight's ability to out-climb and out-accelerate any car on the road, regardless of price, is provable, not only by 32 official A.A.A. records, but by yourself, any time.

Monday is Wash Day, But Why Not Tuesday? Laundrying, according to answers to the question "What Household Task Do You Dislike Doing Most?" which was put to several hundred Maine farm women, is the hardest task of the week. Turn the searchlight on this necessary but tedious task is so disliked and dreaded.

Is it the day? Monday is the traditional wash day, but does it have to be on Monday? Monday morning finds the housewife in a hurry to get the laundry done. The laundry is done on Monday morning. The laundry is done on Monday morning. The laundry is done on Monday morning.

Is it the place? Ideally, of course, the laundry should be done in its own place. If it must be done in the kitchen, it is possible to arrange the room in such a way that the laundry work and kitchen work will not interfere too much. The laundry work and kitchen work will not interfere too much. The laundry work and kitchen work will not interfere too much.

Is it the way you do it, the extra steps you take by having the different pieces of clothing widely separated, the energy you expend in doing things a hard way when there is an easier way? Research studies tell us that there is an amazing difference in the energy used in hanging out clothes between having the clothes on the ground and having it placed on a cart or a wheeled table to say nothing of sitting versus standing to do the hanging.

My Trip from Florida to Maine

By a Maine Visitor

Left West Palm Beach at 7:35 a. m. There were four of us grown people besides little Mary and with all our baggage and our car a big job was very closely packed in. The scenery through Florida is not very changeable, just white sand and scrub palmetto. The sand is so white it looks like patches of snow on the green. Beautiful broad black roads so smooth and level and straight as an arrow. One can look for miles and not see a crook or turn and see it come to a pin point. We followed beside the Indian river for many miles. Passed a lighthouse which we were told was the oldest one in the U. S. We saw lovely pond lilies in bloom right in the ditches beside the road.

Stuart was the first place of any size we passed, pretty houses with well kept lawns with shrubbery and flowers. But it means constant care and plenty of fertilizer and water to have a nice lawn on this sand. Next we came to Fort Pierce, a good sized place and good looking homes and many signs of things to be done as everybody is trying to get a dollar if possible. We had a short detour here as a bridge was being built and went up a hill for Florida. We passed some orange groves but we were told were not gathered and the roads for some distance were all bordered with oleanders all in bloom, red, pink and white.

Next place was Vero Beach quite a nice place and we were told it was good fishing there. Lots of cars passed us all packed up going north. Noticed a California one and a number of little Austins which seemed to go along as fast as the cars. The inhabitants between towns seem to be much more aggressive and in small towns with never a glass window, just wooden shutters and a lot of pickaninies at each one and the old man sitting around smoking a long clay pipe, looking contented and happy and always some black pigs running around. Why they think they must have black pigs is a mystery unless they want things to match.

Our next place was a place called Ocala, a nice place, very nice. Next was Titusville, another good looking place. Then we passed through New Smyrna, a very handsome place. The streets from here all the way up through Daytona and Ocala have the big trees on both sides. The long, gray moss hanging from the limbs and beautiful residences, with lovely lawns, are laid out with flowers and shrubbery. We passed through Daytona but did not go to the beach as that is across the Halifax river. The next, which looks about the same as Daytona, passed through St. Augustine and down the main street, saw the old slave market and drove around by the old Spanish fort, and on to Jacksonville, a big city, and everybody seemed to be busy, crossed the ferry over the St. Johns river and drove to Kingsland and stayed all night at Hotel Camden, had driven 112 miles.

Got started again next morning at 6 a. m., crossed the St. Mary's river, between Florida and Georgia. We went over many long bridges and all over water. Some over railroads and many long stretches of water were built up over swampy land which must have cost a great amount of money and labor. We passed some pine groves, tapped for turpentine. The southern pines do not have any limbs on them until they get up twenty or thirty feet high and then the needles are used to seeing our white pine, with limbs all the way down, they look like a lot of tall poles stuck down.

We passed a number of convicts' camps. They are all high and to us northern people, dressed in striped working clothes, always two guards standing by with guns. Crossed a long bridge over the Savannah river. The water looks like cocoa, from the color of the soil, which is red and when wet, is as slippery as grease. There are no clear streams of water all up through the Carolinas.

Savannah is a very pretty city, many of the streets are laid out with parkways between, and beautiful flowers. We entered North Carolina and the great part which we passed through seemed to be plowed up and planted to corn, tobacco and cotton, and there were more women working in the fields than men. We passed over the Cape Fear river which was more than a mile long, and after going over the main part of the river, the land is so wet the road is built up, some parts twenty-five feet from the ground. Passed through Sumter, a big city.

Soon after passing Sumter we had nice green woods on either side, which was a great relief after passing through so many miles of land all plowed up and planted to crops. Drove to Florence, a nice city, and stopped at the Colonial Manor for the night. Had driven 335 miles.

Started next morning at 6 a. m., at 7:30, we entered North Carolina. We passed tobacco houses where they dry and cure the tobacco. We saw many small children, not over ten years old, working in the fields, hoeing or driving a mule, to cultivate. Came through Dillon, Lumberton and Rocky Mount, small places. As we got into the north part, we began to find hills, which was a variation after the long stretch of level country, and now in Virginia, we saw a few apple orchards which looked homelike.

Passed through the city of Petersburg, where its many brick mansions and beautiful park, with big, shady elms and oaks. Came to the bridge over the Appomattox river, a long one with an ell in the center, leading off to another side of the river, something rather unusual, passed through the city of Richmond, a big one with many tall skyscrapers. Went on a few miles farther by an old mill and stopped for the night at a hotel called the Old Mill Inn.

Got started next morning at 6 a. m. Came through the city of Fredericksburg just outside, there were many men working, widening the street, mostly colored men, almost all the folks we passed coming through Georgia and the Carolinas were colored. Hills now and green woods like Maine.

Went over the Rappahannock river, an immensely long bridge and came to Washington, where we stopped a short time. Went up in the Washington monument and to the White House, and through the rooms which are open to the public, quite a crowd of people looking around. From there to the Smithsonian Institution, where there are many very interesting things to see. We thought we would like to spend a month there, but had to take a hurried look around and away again.

Next came through the big city of Baltimore and over the Susquehanna river. There is a large dam over this river, called the Conowingo Dam, near Conowingo, Maryland. It has made a lake over 100 feet deep and 40 miles long. The U. S. Navy has built on the top of the dam, which is about a mile long. The power house is on one side of the highway and the large cranes for raising the gates are on the other side. There are three traveling cranes to lift the gates which extend about the whole width of the dam. The power which is generated there is used in the big cities near there. Wilmington and Baltimore, principally. It is a very unusual and interesting piece of workmanship.

Our next city was Philadelphia, which is about one hundred miles from Baltimore, we came over the Roosevelt Boulevard, it is fourteen miles long, with three driveways and parkways between, a most beautiful drive, so avoided the traffic of the main part of the city. Then we had a number of cities to come through: Trenton, N. J., Newark, Jersey, Hoboken, and to the wonderful Washington Bridge, over the Hudson river. Truly, a most wonderful bit of handiwork of man. Took the Boston Post road and came to the Hutchinson river parkway, a three lane road, a lovely drive. Then into the state of Connecticut with many more cities, with the usual amount of traffic which we were thankful to get through without mishap into Massachusetts, coming by way of Worcester and Lowell, passed through Portland, N. H., and into good old Maine, with her broad, green fields and lakes and hills, came to the pretty little city of Portland. We were somewhat tired and glad to know we were at the end of our trip.

He sold his soul for a pot of gold. For sure there never's another. Would he so mean, or so it would seem. As he was tempted by children around. But all alone he met his end. He died as he lived, without a friend. He died unloved and unloving. And he never turned that lonesome pit. At the end of a lonesome day. With never a clasp of a friendly hand. Or a voice to bid him stay.
